

Intel vPro Platform

Managed Endpoint service from Insight Canada

Business challenge

Endpoint management is the process of maintaining a network's endpoints, helping desktops, laptops and connected devices perform optimally and securely. Learn how Intel® Active Management Technology (AMT), available from Insight, solves various use cases through managed-service endpoint management.

Our solution

AMT enables a wide range of managed-service features for the Intel vPro® platform. With Intel AMT, administrators get a comprehensive endpoint-management solution through the following:

Remote power control: Administrators have the power to remotely power endpoints on or off at specific times, for applications like digital signage, scheduled tasks like patching and many other use cases.

Hardware alarm clock: The built-in alarm clock starts devices up at predetermined times, without user intervention.

Hardware KVM: With KVM (Keyboard, Video and Mouse) control, admins can remotely access and troubleshoot devices like they were right there, no matter the state of the endpoint or its operating system.

Boot redirection: Admins can redirect the boot process of a device to a remote image. This lets devices be reimaged or booted from a specific image.

Beyond firewall support: Intel AMT can be managed outside of the corporate firewall, enabling admins to manage endpoints outside the network, like devices of employees working from home.

Cloud-based management: Intel AMT can be integrated with existing cloud-based management platforms, for remote management and monitoring of devices anywhere in the world.
